Following in the tradition of Jonathan Swifts Gullivers Travels, Samuel Butler published Erewhon privately in 1872. Arguably the first first anti-Utopian or dystopian novel, Erewhon anticipates later and better known works such as Aldous Huxleys Brave New World and George Orwells 1984. Whereas More and other utopianists were primarily interested in attacking societys ills and making the world a better place, the anti-utopians engaged primarily in either satire of the society in which they lived or in making dire predictions about the dismal fate that awaits humanity. Butler is most decidedly in the former category, since he proves in not only Erewhon but also his more famous work, the semi-autobiographical novel, The Way of All Flesh, that his main concern is in attacking the complacency and hypocrisy he saw infecting Victorian society. Like Mores island of Utopia, Butlers Erewhon is a remote kingdom, not to be found on any map, which is discovered by the narrator of the novel (biographers of Butler have assumed it is modeled on a part of New Zealand, which anyone who has viewed the Lord...
