Excerpt: . best hopes were fixed, began to experience some melioration of that deep-seated sorrow which for long had corroded her heart; yet hoping nought, nor presuming to expect aught, her thoughts and feelings were resolutely suppressed, or concentered to a single point--the future interests of her child. Her genuine and unsophisticated ideas of duty taught her that to ensure protection for the unconscious being she had been the means of ushering into life, her whole efforts should be directed, and no sacrifices of self be esteemed too great to achieve an end so momentous, and so simply due to the object for whom they were made. Such was the pure morality of a nature uncontaminated by association with the world, unbiassed by its contracted estimates of right and wrong. In various ways had Angelo evinced ex vol. I. K traordinary friendship towards Eugene; it how remained to demonstrate still higher his regard for him, by giving him his confidence. On those days when he dined abroad, it sometimes happened that he did not return till a late hour of the night, or towards morning; and sometimes not till the following day. Gabrielle, who never accompanied him from home, knew not whither he went at these times; but naturally concluded that convivial or agreeable society occasionally detained him thus long. It remained, however, for her to become more accurately informed. The departed Montmorency had taught her to play on various instruments, among others on the...
