The outdoor loving Budapestians play, bathe, and eat in their city park on Margaret Island; on Harriet Island the boys and girls who live in the crowded part of St. Paul have a delightful summer playground, and the upper end of Nicollet Island was formerly a fashionable residence district of Minneapolis. In some respects the Old World city is ahead of its new rival; its streets are cleaner, and its inhabitants take life more leisurely and have more time to play. When Minneapolis and St. Paul are as old as their Hungarian twin, they may have learned more wisdom. As it is, they have done so much in fifty-four years that we may forgive them this fault. Who would have dreamed that in little more than half a century a city group of over 500,000 people would replace a wilderness! The city builders who did this work did not confine their efforts to creating big industries alone; they were wiser than that. Schools went up side by side with sawmills and flour-mills, and the great State University at Minneapolis offers to the poorest child the possibilities of a college education. Of late years both cities have drawn within their limits a series of parks that can hardly be matched for loveliness. Lakes, Copyright. Sweet. MinneapolU. THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA ravines, the romantic Minnehaha Falls, wooded ridges, the bordering river bluffs, make an enchanting whole which offers health and happiness to the future as well...
