Reviews

Without doubt, this is actually the best job by any publisher. It is written in basic phrases instead of difficult to understand. You will like the way the author publishes this publication.

Not illustrated. 1898 Excerpt: . . . whose aim is to interest and instruct but whose effect is more often to mislead and misinform. The illustrations in recent books by Montgomery, Channing and McMaster are commended. Few of the maps used are considered satisfactory, many of them being inaccurate. Topical analyses and skeletons are characterized as harmless, dry, hard and dead, excepting, of course, such as students and teachers make for themselves. The report closes with a review of the leading features, commendable and otherwise, of the eighteen books examined. From this it appears that all have good points, none is perfect, all are great improvements upon their predecessors, and the ideal history yet remains to be written. Where schools are circumscribed and barred by the law from using the best book one can only pity; but where there is freedom teachers of history will surely find the work of selection greatly simplified by reading this report. Exercises For February 22nd. By LYDIA R. BLAICH. (Director of Practice in the Indianapolis Normal School.) WHAT child is not familiar with the story of the hatchet and the cherry tree Are there many children who have not been told over and over that the boy Washington loved army plays, and how he drilled his classmates Has not his code of fifty-seven or more rules of conduct copied at the age of thirteen formed a part of the majority of Washington celebrations Repeating these things, in spite of their great interest, year after year in...
