Storylandia, Issue 5: The glass wall stretched for miles, a perfect plane. A man, covered in dirt from his journey, stood stricken, staring into its surface. Negative Man, by Theresa Hinkle Mr. BubbleHead considered distance and velocity and time to be subsets of Fate and all of it could victimize the pedestrian, either perfect in their A.D.D. spaces or luckless as grapefruits. The Bubblehead Chronicles, by Kyle Hemmings Carole Linnaeker stood in line at the bank for six minutes, then watched the next free teller beckon the person standing behind her to his window. Carole feebly...
